What is Celtic Spirituality?

Celtic spirituality is a Christian tradition that developed in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and Brittany from the 5th to the 12th centuries. It is characterized by its emphasis on the immanence of God in creation, the interconnectedness of all things, and the importance of community.

Celtic spirituality is not a set of doctrines or dogmas, but rather a way of life. It is about living in harmony with the natural world, honoring the sacredness of all creation, and seeking a deep personal relationship with God.

The Principles of Celtic Spirituality

There are many different aspects to Celtic spirituality, but at its core are a few key principles:

- The immanence of God: Celtic spirituality believes that God is not distant and unknowable, but rather is present in all things. God is in the trees and the streams, the mountains and the valleys. God is in the laughter of children and the tears of the grieving.

- The interconnectedness of all things: Celtic spirituality teaches that all things are connected, from the smallest blade of grass to the largest star. We are all part of a web of life, and what we do to the earth and to each other affects us all.

- The importance of community: Celtic spirituality values community above all else. We are meant to live in relationship with each other, to support and encourage each other on our journey. Community is where we find our strength and our sense of belonging.
