About the Author

Dr. William H. Bates was an American ophthalmologist who developed a revolutionary method for correcting imperfect sight without the use of glasses or surgery. He was born in New Jersey in 1860 and graduated from the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital in 1885.

After practicing ophthalmology for several years, he became dissatisfied with the traditional methods of treating eye problems, which he believed were ineffective and often harmful. He began to develop his own method of treatment, which he called "visual hygiene," which focused on relaxing the muscles of the eyes and improving the focusing ability.

Dr. Bates' method was controversial at the time, but it has since been proven to be effective in correcting a wide range of vision problems, including nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism, and presbyopia. Today, Dr. Bates' method is used by eye care professionals around the world to help people achieve clear vision naturally.
