For years, women have been subjected to misogyny, discrimination, and violence at the hands of men. In this groundbreaking and eye-opening book, author Jane Doe exposes the ugly truth about male privilege and entitlement, and offers a roadmap for women to fight back.

Through powerful personal stories and incisive analysis, Doe examines the ways in which men have historically oppressed women, from the Salem witch trials to the present day. She argues that the time for polite conversation is over, and that women must now take a stand and demand change.
